INTRODUCTION

The Workspace Group has become a familiar sight across London in recent years. Its portfolio of modern company-tenanted buildings in premium locations for businesses have attracted occupants of all sizes, from large household names to savvy startups. Many locations also have smart co-working Club Workspace areas for freelancers and people from small companies to network and collaborate.

All this activity obviously means a lot of footfall through these businesses every day – and a forward-thinking company such as Workspace wanted to find a modern visitor management solution that its tenants would benefit from. With centre managers constantly engaging with people to help maximise their usage of the property's facilities, a static "smiling person at a desk" wouldn't have suited the environment or the needs of the businesses – which is where Vgreet digital visitor management system came in.

"Vgreet has been everyone's best friend, helping our customers get to know each other. It's an amazing tool which helps visitors find anyone within the building when I'm not on duty. Its design complements that space perfectly. It looks so engaging and professional"

– Lucia Aneglovicova, Centre Manager, Pill Box

VGREET MULTI-TENANT VISITOR MANAGEMENT

To streamline these everyday tasks, each Workspace Vgreet hosts the building's tenant directory, provides wayfinding and allows any visitor to search and contact the person they need via a simple intercom-style call. It also allows the unit to buzz them in remotely.

Perhaps best of all is the content system has been designed to be modular, meaning Workspace can highlight the character of each building's location and showcase its tenants, all from the same easy-to-navigate interface, and as its tenants and facilities change, a simple update can be sent remotely to the unit without the need for an on-site engineer.

Hatton Garden's Centre Manager, Stuart Lancaster, says, "The Record Hall is one of the newest Workspace properties and has changed a famous modernist building into a fantastic business centre for every kind of business – and Vgreet is at the very centre of it."
